Navarro County Trinity Project Steering Committee Formed

By SAM PENDERGRAST Editor of The Sun

Navarro County voters--along with voters in the 16 other counties bordering the Trinity River between Dallas and Livingston—will have an opportunity to register their views on the project, and a Navarro County Steering Committee has been named to "tell the Trinity story" in preparation for the election expected in February.

That was the crux of a dinner meeting of some 60 local and county businessmen, ranchers, farmers, public officials and Trinity supporters hosted by banker W.D. (Hank) Wyatt last night at the Navarro Hotel.

Recalling a disastrous flood near his Oklahoma home when he was nine years old—when the bloated bodies of cows and horses destroyed by the raging waters made the area unsafe for human habitation—Wyatt said he was delighted with the turn-out for the busy pre-holiday meeting-59 acceptances were received from the 65 invitations—and he kept the proceedings short and business-like.

Exactly one hour after the steak dinners were consumed ("to strike a blow for the cattlemen of the area," Wyatt said), Wyatt accepted nominations from the floor for an informal ten-man steering committee charged principally with "telling the Trinity story" in preparation for the expected election in which voters throughout the Trinity Valley will be asked to endorse the massive flood controlrecreation-canalization project by approving area funding of a token part—6.7 per cent—of the

Named to the steering committee were Blake Gillen, Dave Walker, C.M. (Sonny) Newton, Jr., Tillman Reed, Paul Sloan, Bobby D. Wilson, Arthur Patrick, George Kelt, J.O. Williams and James Fortson.

They will work with Wyatt and long-time Trinity project leader Joe Butler to begin what was repeatedly called an "educational program" to get the facts of the project to Navarro County citizens.

Wyatt made a dramatic introduction to the discussion, citing his experiences with Oklahoma canalization and water projects that have become realities.

"Oklahoma City was within two weeks of being without water, and a man of vision named Sen. Kerr told them 'My imagination isn't hampered by a degree in engineering.' He spearheaded the building of the lake at Atoka that Texas cities later tried to get water from.

"We need to recognize that our Trinity River—and a lot of rivers-have pollution problems...people want recreational sites...and I think they (Trinity project backers) have a plan now that will satisfy everyone," he said, noting that non-metropolitan areas such as that between Dallas and Houston are, for the first time in 30 years, experiencing a trend "back in our direction" of people and industry. "We have been educating our children and sending them somewhere else to make a living, and now we have an opportunity to help provide a livelihood nearer home," he said, disclosing that three industrial prospects have been studying Corsicana in the past two weeks.

"They're looking at smaller towns," he said, indicating that a recent prospect with heavy "tonnage" requirements reported it can save $2 a ton by shipping from Muskogee, Okla., via the new Arkansas River canal, rather than from Houston.

"I attended a lot of meetings about the Hugo Dam on the Konishi River when people were saying it could never be built and they're finishing it up now," he said. "This is an opportunity for our community and area, and if anything is going to be done, we are going to have to do it.

Wyatt introduced James Strawn of the Trinity Improvement Association and Dan Vance of the Trinity River Authority, who filled in details of the proposed election in informal talks and in response to questions from the floor.

Wyatt had been quoted in The Daily Sun Monday as saying this was not a public hearing but an organizational meeting of area backers of the project, and no opposition was expected or

Instead, numerous participants asked key questions and made observations about area reaction to recent attitudes about the Trinity project that has been talked for decades but is now at a crossroads.

Strawn said the massive project authorized by Congress in 1965 and funded for Corps of Engineers planning for the past three years is now in the "nuts and bolts" designing stage, and the Corps reported it is "physically in condition to start construction by July of 1974", with an early element to be the sprawling Tennessee Colony Reservoir near Fairfield about which recent environmental meetings were held in accordance with the 1969 National Environmental Policy Act. He said another general meeting will be held in mid-March to cover the "whole spectrum" of the Trinity project. after which the plans and specifications could be turned over to Washington for final funding and subsequent implementation by the Corps of Engineers.

The Trinity program is now the "number one" public works project in national priority after 15 years of what he called "maneuvering", Strawn said, and if it loses that priority now it could either set the project back 15 years or eliminate it as a possibility for future develop-

Strawn reported the TRA was directed in 1965 to acquire rightsof-way, re-locate applicable utilities, arrange navigational features, and seek area approval in the form of a successful 17county referendum on the question of local taxes to retire bonds for non-federal participation.

Strawn and Vance declined to guess what might be done by the TRA Board of Directors, but they noted the Texas Legislature in 1968 authorized the levying of a 15-cents-per-$100-valuation property tax throughout the 17 county area if approved by both a majority of all voters in the area and voters in a majority of the 17 counties.

(In other words, voters in the more heavily populated areas of Dallas and Tarrant Counties could not pass the election unless a majority of voters in a majority of smaller counties also approved. The obvious intention was to decrease the influence of more populous counties. Equally obviously, a majority of the tax dollars would be paid in the areas with bigger population.)

Strawn reported studies of the local tax structure in Navarro County show a taxpayer with property valued at $28,000 would pay "right at $9 a year" for the life of the bonds—with "25 to 30 years a realistic expectation" for the bonding period.

A typical 300-acre tract of agricultural land would be assessed about $6.37 a year, he

In the 17 counties, he said, "it looks like that would generate about $7 million a year", which he later pegged at 6.7 per cent of the total cost of the project, with federal funds accounting for the other 93.3 per cent. Strawn emphasized that the TRA is responsible for calling the referendum and he cannot predict what its board of directors will do, but indications are that it will seek approval of the full 15-cents-per-$100-valuation

In answer to a question about effects of the Arkansas Canal, Butler said he just received a report showing that between five and six million tons of freight had moved on the canal in its first ten months of operation, and Vance noted more than a billion dollars has been generated in development and construction along the so-called environmentalists who have spoken against various aspects of the huge project, Vance remarked "I think people like Joe Butler are the real conservationists", adding "We've got to realize that there's a middle ground." He said it is recognized that some past projects undoubtedly involved some bad aspects, but he cited the adjustments to the Since approval of the bond Tennessee Colony plans as an issue for a new municipal example of the TRA's interest in building; Manager Ferguson preserving such environmental present City Hall building for Timing of the election for February was predicted on the basis of the necessity of a 30-day notification by the TRA and the need to have the local funding arranged before the Corps of Engineers makes its final presentation in Washington. In closing, Wyatt perhaps captured the environmental attitude of the gathering when he said, in closing, "I just wish Bob Lavender could be here; he says he used to swim in and drink the water from the Trinity.".

City Overrules P&ZC On Mobile Home Plea, Tables Action on Bids

Only one new zoning change matter came in for preliminary enactment at Tuesday's City Commission meeting.

By a 4-to-1 vote, the Commission overruled the Planning and Zoning Commission denial of zoning change sought by Thomas E. Hutchins and gave him the Residential 4 classification he sought along with a specific use permit to have a mobile home located on property at 1221 S. 181/2 St. The appeal by Hutchins had been under investigation for several weeks, and in overriding the P&Z the Commission found that other mobile homes existed in the neighborhood and Hutchins should not be denied similar privileges.

The action came after Commissioner P.D. Fullwood offered a motion that the City sustain the P&Z in denying the change, but it died for lack of a second.

Final approval was given five other zoning change ordinances. These granted to H.O. Olsen Multiple Family 2 zoning on acreage on which a complex of "townhouses" are to be built; granted to Fred M. Allison a combination of Commercial and General Retail zoning on property extending through the 600 block of N. Main through to N. Beaton streets; granted to B.R. Colburn General Retail zoning for a childcare center at 518 N. 15th St.; granted the B.R. Hammonds General Retail zoning on lots at 927 and 929 W. First Ave. to extend New Garden Center display space.

Commissioner Scott cast the only "no" vote on the Hammonds zoning, with the others receiving unanimous approval.

Preliminary approval was given an ordinance closing an east-west alley in City Block 501 as requested by abutting property owners in the block bounded by S. Bunert, S. Fry, E. Sixth and E. Collin streets.

At the request of Bill McKee of McKee Lumber. Co., the Commission authorized drafting of an ordinance to be considered later to close an alley in to 500 block of S.7th St., running east-west behind the lumber yard.

In other actions, the Commission tabled as Chairman Rev. The Commission deferred until later adoption of a budget for anticipated federal "Revenue Sharing'' funds Corsicana receives and projected use of this money for street maintenance purposes.
